Outside The Earth:

Energy Resources for Human Settlement in the Solar System and Earth's Future in Space William A.

Ambrose, James F. Reilly II, Douglas C. Peters, 2013-03-14 The book's purpose is to provide the quantitative foundation for beginning to think about developing energy and minerals outside of Earth's atmosphere that are necessary to support scientific missions space and extra terrestrial scientific stations and permanent colonies and ultimately expand Earth's economy beyond the near earth environment to include space resources We cannot envision a situation where all resources required for future space activities are exported from Earth therefore this book clearly illustrates that an effective economy is possible beyond Earth's surface when we consider the resources available in near Earth space Our first audience is members of AAPG American Institute of Mining Metallurgical and Petroleum Engineers AIME and other professionals engaged in energy and resource development As energy professionals we are concerned on a daily basis with providing the necessary energy and minerals required for our growing world population and the increasing standard of living that comes with ample energy availability And more than anything else AAPG members are explorers We are the professionals who have pushed back the boundaries of our resource base from capturing petroleum resources from surface seeps to drilling onshore wells to extract oil and gas and to venturing offshore into increasingly difficult and hostile environments to supply the cheap and abundant energy made available by our advances in technology There are more similarities than differences between deepwater exploration and development and space exploration Beyond our own members however our audience is every rational human being who understands human health and well being quality of life education and freedom are dependent on the energy and minerals that support our advanced civilization Space is the next frontier and as the world civilization expands beyond Earth's surface we hope this publication serves to illustrate there are abundant opportunities to support and maintain and in fact allow to prosper civilization's expansion into space Publisher's website Year Book Carnegie Institution of Washington, 1924 List of the names of persons engaged in the various activities v 10 p 243 257 Beyond Earth's Boundaries United States. Office of Exploration, 1988 Adaptive On- and Off-Earth Environments Angelo Cervone, Henriette Bier, Advenit Makaya, 2024-04-10 This volume investigates the challenges and opportunities for designing manufacturing and operating off Earth infrastructures in order to establish adaptive human habitats The adaptive aspects are considered with respect to the development of adequate infrastructures designed to support human activities Given the limitations in bringing materials from Earth utilisation of in situ resources is crucial for establishing and maintaining these infrastructures Adaptive on and off Earth Environments focuses among other aspects on the design production and operation processes required to build and maintain such off Earth infrastructures while heavily relying on In Situ Resource Utilisation ISRU Such design production and operation processes integrate cyber physical approaches developed and tested on Earth The challenge is to adapt on Earth approaches to off Earth applications aiming at technology advancement and ultimately transfer from on to off Earth research This challenge is addressed with contributions from various disciplines ranging from power generation to architecture construction and materials engineering involving ISRU for manufacturing processes All chapters related to these disciplines are structured with an emphasis on computing and adaptivity of on Earth technology to off Earth applications and vice versa to serve society at large
