All parties support Aggregate Resources Act review

Sep 20, 2011

The Ontario Liberal Party will review the province's Aggregate Resources Act (ARA) if re-elected to power, it was announced this week, prompting its competition in the upcoming election to question the timing.

The ARA, which has been chastised by many people opposing The Highland Companies' plans for a 2,316-acre quarry in Melancthon, is the provincial legislation regulating the licensing and operation of aggregate pits and quarries across Ontario.

During the past few months, Highland's opponents, as well as several politicians, have claimed the ARA is unequipped to deal with an application as large as what has been proposed.

According to Dufferin-Caledon Liberal candidate Lori Holloway, the ARA review will identify where pits and quarries will be allowed to operate, as well as ensure environmental, community and economic concerns are taken into account.

It is expected any review would draw on research gathered by the 2010 State of the Aggregate Resource in Ontario Study (SAROS), and consultations with stakeholders.

"It is very important to review the act. I've been voicing my concerns from day one," Holloway said. "We need to ensure to communities around Ontario that the ARA is kept up to date."

If elected, Holloway has promised to continue pushing for a moratorium on applications, prohibiting quarries from being built on class 1, 2, or 3 agricultural land, unmapped watersheds, or quarries extending below the water table, until an ARA review is complete.

"Due to the local issues that we're dealing with around the Melancthon application, it is more important now than ever that the province commit to a review that will help us deal with the environmental issues related to aggregates, but also the growing demand for aggregate," Holloway added.

According to Green Party candidate Rob Strang, Tuesday's announcement is simply the first step in solving a much larger, more complex, situation.

Beyond the ARA, the next move, and "much more meaningful step," would be to review the Greater Golden Horseshoe Growth Plan, which calls for 80 per cent of
