ABSTRACT: In the almost twenty years since Vasarhelyi and Halper (1991) reported on their pioneering implementation of what has come to be known as Continuous Auditing (CA), the concept has increasingly moved from theory into practice. A 2006 survey by PricewaterhouseCoopers shows that half of all responding firms use some sort of CA techniques, and the majority of the rest plan to do so in the near future. CA not only has an increasing impact on auditing practice, but is also one of the rare instances in which such a significant change was led by the researchers. In this paper we survey the state of CA after two decades of research into continuous auditing theory and practice, and draw out the lessons learned by us in recent pilot CA projects at two major firms, to examine where this unique partnership between academics and auditors will take CA in the future.

Keywords: continuous auditing; internal audit; audit systems.

I. INTRODUCTION

Two decades have now passed since the work started on the first large-scale commercial continuous auditing project reported in the original paper by Vasarhelyi and Halper (1991). That project at Bell Laboratories relied on the groundbreaking information technology of the day (PCs, databases, corporate networks, but not yet the Internet) to assure the reliability of the AT&T large billing systems through the automated acquisition and analysis of data and the electronic communication of alarms. Already that first project clearly demonstrated that the ultimate point of continuous auditing (CA) is to bring auditing closer to the operational process, and away from the traditional backward-looking once-a-year examination of financial statements.

This paper draws on the lessons obtained from work on CA at major Fortune 100 firms, led by the authors working in close collaboration with the internal audit departments of the clients. While case studies of some of these implementations have been published elsewhere (Alles et al. 2006, 2007), this paper steps back to draw the broader insights they offer about the emerging conceptual model of continuous assurance. These studies were particularly
