

Most Common Orthopedic-Related Injuries

With the various movements we make every day, we subject our bones, muscles, tendons, and ligaments to a lot of wear and tear as we go through life. As a result, many people may suffer an orthopedic injury. The most common of which include:

- Dislocated shoulder
- Wrist Fracture
- ACL Tear
- Stress Fracture
- Ankle and Foot Sprain
- Rotator Cuff Tear
- Tennis Elbow
- Carpal Tunnel Syndrome
- Meniscus Tear
- Plantar Fasciitis

DISLOCATED SHOULDER

Impacts during accidents and sports activities are the top causes of shoulder dislocation, in which the head of the humerus separates from the shoulder socket. People who dislocate their shoulders will experience severe pain as well as swelling and bruising in the shoulder or upper arm area.

ROTATOR CUFF TEAR

Repetitive shoulder motions can injure the rotator cuff, a group of muscles and tendons that surrounds the shoulder joint. Symptoms of a rotator cuff injury include pain and weakness when lifting or rotating the affected arm.

TENNIS ELBOW

Excessive use of the arm, forearm, and hand muscles may lead to tennis elbow, a condition where the tissue around the elbow are irritated and inflamed, causing pain.

CARPAL TUNNEL SYNDROME

Refers to pressure on the median nerve in the wrist that causes pain, numbness, weakness, and tingling in the hand and fingers. Overuse of hands, arms, and fingers when doing repetitive tasks is often to blame for this orthopedic injury.

MENISCUS TEAR

The meniscus is the cartilage on our knees that facilitates leg movement. Tearing the meniscus after forcefully twisting or rotating your knee during an activity will bring on pain, swelling, and stiffness. Extending the injured knee will also become difficult.

PLANTAR FASCIITIS

Plantar fasciitis occurs when there is repeated stress on the plantar fascia, the band of tissue connecting the toes and the heel bone. It is the most common reason for heel pain.

WRIST FRACTURE

Often caused by falling on an outstretched hand, a wrist fracture or a broken wrist is a common injury during sports and dancing activities. Also known as a distal radius fracture, a broken wrist is marked by pain and swelling. Moving and using the hand and wrist will be hard, and even moving the fingers will bring on pain.

ACL TEAR

The anterior cruciate ligament or ACL is the main ligament on your knee that keeps it stabilized. When making abrupt stops and turns, a person risks suffering an ACL tear, which causes severe pain, rapid swelling, and inability when standing.

ANKLE AND FOOT SPRAIN

One of the most common orthopedic-related injuries, ankle and foot sprains occur when you accidentally turn or twist your foot or ankle, stretching partially tearing or tearing completely the ligaments that keep the bones in their proper position. Pain, swelling, bruising, and tenderness when you touch the ankle are common symptoms of an ankle or foot sprain.

STRESS FRACTURE

Overuse and repetitive activity are the primary causes of a stress fracture, which are small cracks in a bone, typically in the feet and ankle. Stress fractures are common among athletes, particularly those who run and jump a great deal while in action.

Some orthopedic injuries heal on their own with medication, rest, and time, while some may require surgery. It's always best to consult a reputable orthopedic specialist to know your options if you suffer any of the above injuries.
