

The impact of relativity

The physicist Albert Einstein changed the notions of space, time and gravity that were considered well established since Newton's and Galileo's times with his theory of relativity (special and general), in the first decades of the last century. This would dramatically alter our perception of the origin, evolution and structure of the universe.

Unimagined world

In 1905 Albert Einstein published his theory of relativity that space and time are not absolute. He stated that they "exist" in a single continuum of spacetime, the "spacetime" that can be distorted like an elastic band, in the 1910s, Einstein published gravity as his theory (general relativity) and concluded that gravity is a consequence of the space-time bending. According to the physicist, the trajectory of light is modified when approaching heavenly bodies that warp space around them.

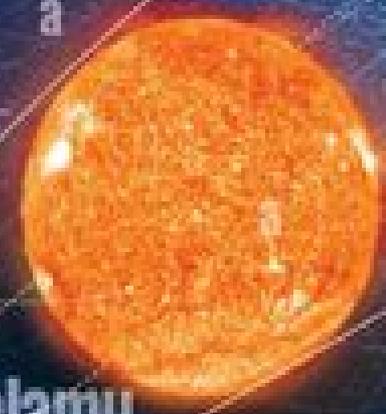

Space-time
In the context of the theory of relativity, space and time are not absolute. They exist in a single continuum of spacetime, the "spacetime" that can be distorted like an elastic band, in the 1910s, Einstein published gravity as his theory (general relativity) and concluded that gravity is a consequence of the space-time bending.

Big Bang
Einstein's ideas played a role and were essential to think about the "Big Bang" as the origin of the universe and the evolution of space-time (initially static universe).

Mass warps
When approaching the Sun and the Earth, the curvature of the space-time. The Sun's type of warping and space-time curvature is the Sun's gravity for the Earth.

Equivalence
In 1907, Einstein realized that physics must be the same whether you are in a rocket ship or on the Earth. The idea of the equivalence principle is that you cannot tell the difference between the two.

Curvature
The trajectory of the Earth's orbit around the Sun is curved because of the Sun's gravity.

Light speed
The speed of light is constant for all observers. In 1905, Einstein published his theory of special relativity, which states that the speed of light is constant for all observers, regardless of their motion. This led to the development of the theory of relativity.

Generalization
The generalization of special relativity to a more general case. The presence of mass warps space-time, and the curvature of space-time is what we perceive as gravity. The comparison could be made and proven right in the 1919 experiment.

Verification
The light of the stars is deflected by the Sun, but the light is not deflected by the Earth's gravity. The experiment was conducted in 1919 and proved Einstein's theory of general relativity.

Time dilation
In 1905, Einstein published his theory of special relativity, which states that time is relative. Time is not absolute, but it is relative to the observer. This led to the development of the theory of relativity.

General relativity
The theory of general relativity, which states that gravity is a consequence of the curvature of space-time. This led to the development of the theory of relativity.

Space-time
The theory of space-time, which states that space and time are not absolute, but they are relative to the observer. This led to the development of the theory of relativity.
