Abstract

The Post Cold War international system has witnessed new threats to global peace and security. It is a commonplace fact that lethal terrorist activities, contagious intra-national conflicts as well as transnational criminal activities are today pervading global arena. Regrettably, the situation has continued to escalate astronomically despite its devastating effects. Consequently, the study is aimed at providing a "content analysis" of the causes, dimensions and effects of the stated phenomena on the global community. The methodology adopted was that of descriptive, thereby deriving heavily from the secondary sources for data collection, with the theoretical framework of analysis anchoring on "systems theory." The paper finds out that internal armed conflicts are on the increase especially in most of ethnically polarized and economically challenged nations; that the number of deaths resulting from terrorist attacks after the end of cold war is obviously alarming; and transnational criminal activities have taken different forms and astonishing velocity in the Post Cold War World. To confront the situation squarely, there must be a collective effort towards tackling the present security threats in the world today

Introduction

The pervasiveness of terrorism, intra-state conflicts and transnational crime has continued to pose a colossal threat to global peace and security in the Post Cold War World. Today, the world has witnessed lethal terrorist activities, contagious intra-national conflicts as well as transnational criminal activities pervading every nook and cranny of the 'global village'. Muzaffer (2008:44) noted that while classical inter-state wars tend to decrease in the post-Cold War era; there are many other serious threats to international peace beyond the full control of nation-states, most notably ethnic conflicts, religious militancy, terrorism, North-South conflict, and unfair economic competition. In his own reaction, Ekpe (2012:437) posited that the incidence of terrorism has reached an epidemic proportion and terrorism is increasingly becoming lethal. In fact, global terrorism remains a fixture of world politics (Kegley, 2007:432).

Today, religious fundamentalists have in the course of projecting or/and defending one or more ideological beliefs engaged in different forms of terrorist activities, with strong networks across the globe. International terrorist groups such as El Qaeda, Hezbollah, Al-jihad, Hamas (Islamic Resistance Movement) etc are instructive in this regard. Even Boko
