What constitutes the local in a global age has long been a concern of social scientists. These edited collections bring together anthropologists writing about economic and social changes occurring in locations scattered across several continents. The stated purpose of Plural Globalities is to identify "when global processes articulate with local specificities" because "they give rise to particular responses and outcomes." More specifically, contributors "describe how a number of local communities have behaved differently under conditions of globalization. . . . We find that globalization has had a range of outcomes for individuals and communities" (p. 2). This is a traditional understanding of the global-local connection, where "outside" forces enter places and influence residents and their activities. For the authors, some destabilization of the hegemony of the world system is accepted: "Globalization is not monolithic, economically or culturally. It is a sometimes chaotic and contradictory array of processes, perceptions, consumption patterns, politics, worldviews, production strategies (combinations of post-Fordist and Fordist strategies still exist side-by-side, after all) and so on." Consequently, "the global and the local are highly variable and problematic categories that are not self-evident. . . . It isn't as simple as a dichotomy between general and specific, center and periphery, general and unique" (p. 14).

Contributors vary in terms of how thoroughly they reject the assumptions of world system theories, however. O'Neill, studying Nepalese carpet makers, notes that, as in other societies, industries producing these crafts are neither survivals of natural economies nor cases of peasant "petty commodity production." . . . Western entrepreneurs are not alone in defining those new products and markets; in some cases, local risk-takers see the potential in the resources around them and are inspired to transform them into new livelihoods. (P. 149)

Plural Globalities In Multiple Localities:

Plural Globalities in Multiple Localities Martha W. Rees, Josephine Smart, 2001-04-25 Plural Globalities in Multiple Localities New World Borders brings together various papers from the Society for Economic Anthropology's 1997 annual meeting. Structured around the theme Globalization and Regionalization, the meeting investigated the way this phenomenon has influenced the restructuring and reconfiguration of businesses, states, cities, and social life since the 1980s. The Society for Economic Anthropology brought a local or micro perspective to the study of globalization that has been dominated by macro approaches. The papers from this volume present the multiplicity of globalities that we face today and examine the contributions anthropology has to offer to this field of study.

Migration and Economy Lillian Trager, 2005-10-13 Trager and her coauthors focus on migration not as a single event but as a dynamic process that responds to and is shaped by broader economic, cultural, and social forces. Individual essays consider issues of international and internal migration of voluntary migration and forced movements due to civil conflicts and environmental degradation and of macro level forces and micro level institutions. The authors investigate a wide variety of types of mobility, describe transnational and multilocal networks through which remittances and other flows take place, focus on migrants as active agents, and examine the impacts of ethnicity and assimilation. They offer original studies on Mexico, Puerto Rico, West Africa, Kazakhstan, and Mozambique. This new volume will be a valuable resource for researchers and practitioners in development anthropology, migration studies, and international planning and policy.

City-Regions in Prospect? Kevin Edson Jones, Alex Lord, Rob Shields, 2015-11-06 Essays exploring the prospects of the city region.

Fieldwork in Tourism Michael C. Hall, 2010-10-04 The inherent mobility of tourists and consequent relative ephemerality of contact between the visitor and the visited, tourism phenomena have specific characteristics that challenge the usual fieldwork practices of the social and physical sciences. Such conditions create specific concerns for the tourism researcher in terms of their positionality, relationality, accessibility, ethics, reflexivity, and methodological appropriateness. Fieldwork in Tourism is the first book to focus on this extremely significant component of contemporary tourist research and provides hands-on approaches to conducting tourism fieldwork in a range of settings, exploring the methodological considerations and offering strategies to mitigate these. The book also discusses how fieldwork affects researchers personally and what happens to field relationships. Divided into five sections, each with an introduction and a guide to further reading, the chapters cover the context of fieldwork, research, relationships, politics, and power, the position of the researcher in the field, research methods and processes, including virtual fieldwork, and the relationships between being a tourist and doing fieldwork. The concluding chapter suggests that the link between tourism and fieldwork perhaps offers greater insights into understanding creative fieldwork than may be imagined. This book incorporates a rich and diverse set of fieldwork experiences, insights, and reflections on conducting fieldwork in different settings, the problems that emerge, the solutions that were developed, and the realities of being in the field. Fieldwork in Tourism is an essential
