

How to use this Pocket Guide

In today's climate of Government austerity, organisations, including schools, need to continually reassess their ability to generate additional income streams. For organisations such as schools that are overwhelmingly reliant on Government funding this new financial reality increasingly means moving towards grant fundraising.

Whilst fundraising for projects and activities has always been part of the schools 'core DNA' with summer fayres, sponsored events and local fundraising a firm part of the school calendar, grant fundraising is often an unfamiliar activity. Successful grant fundraising requires a different approach and one that is becoming increasingly professionalised. However, today's demands on schools means that grant fundraising is increasingly becoming a core school activity. This publication aims to offer an entry-level guide to applying for a grant with information and tips accessible to new grant fundraisers and more experienced hands.

Did you know.....

A survey of school fundraising in 2009, showed that nearly half of secondary schools and six per cent of primary schools successfully raised more than £10,000 in extra funds.

Many schools are now realising that carrying out their own fundraising activities can provide the extra cash and resources they need to raise standards and meet their development plans. Each year hundreds of millions of pounds of external cash and resources are available to schools that know how to access them.

Grant fundraising can be a daunting task especially if you haven't been responsible for it before or if you are starting up a new project or area of work. Above all, grant fundraising is an activity that requires you to be organised, consistent and professional.
