

THE ESSENTIAL CURRY POWDERS

The word 'curry', which has become synonymous with so many dishes (particularly from the Indian subcontinent), hails its roots in the Tamil word 'kari'. Originally this meant thick paper or leaves, but was later replaced to include rice, lentils and other staple dishes – particularly from south India and later the entire region.

Ironically, you will struggle to find 'curry powder' in India, as each region has its own unique blend of spices. On the other hand, a few specific spice blends are commonly referred to as 'curry powder' in the UK and have the makings of a number of dishes. Back in the day, many households had their own special blends, but today the store-bought versions are gaining popularity.

Different regions of the Indian subcontinent have slightly different blends of curry powder and it's not uncommon to find recipes calling for 'madrasi', 'andhra', 'kerala' or even 'fragrant' curry powder. To keep things simple and consistent, I have used one of three curry powders in the recipes that follow. Where there is a more complex spice blend required for a recipe, the precise recipe for the blend has been included alongside the main recipe.

This section includes recipes for the three essential UK Indian curry powders as well as Madras, Andhra, Kerala and even different from the 'Indian' curry powders found in grocery stores across the UK. The Indian curry powders are commonly found at their green or yellow. Madras like Turmeric, Andhra and Kerala are more powdery.

This recipe is also known as dhaniya or Coriander, which is usually pronounced as 'Dhani and Dal', as there are usually eight ingredients in it. I have, however, seen recipes that have more or fewer than eight ingredients, but as we gained sight of the real-world uses to produce our recipe.

Preheat the oven to 150°C (300°F). Spread all the ingredients on a large baking sheet and place in the oven for 15 mins, rotating the tray every 10 minutes.

Leave to cool completely and grind to a fine powder in a blender or spice grinder. Pass through a sifter and discard any remaining large pieces. Transfer to an airtight container and store in the fridge for up to 3 months.

UNROASTED CURRY POWDER

MAKES ABOUT 100g (3.5oz)

10g (1/2oz) coriander seeds

10g (1/2oz) cumin seeds

10g (1/2oz) fennel seeds

10g (1/2oz) fenugreek seeds

10g (1/2oz) mustard seeds

10g (1/2oz) green cardamom seeds

1g (1/16oz) salt

10g (1/2oz) ground coriander or cumin seeds

NOTES

The best way of drying the ingredients isn't to roast them, but simply to dry them. Removing any residual moisture from them will intensify the flavour of the ground powder and ensure it lasts a lot longer. If you live in a hot climate you could consider the option of placing them in a large bag covered by another (cheaper) one, for a couple of days in the morning afternoon sun.
