Reclaiming Difference:

Reclaiming Difference Carine M. Mardorossian, 2005 In Reclaiming Difference Carine Mardorossian examines the novels of four women writers Jean Rhys (Dominica, UK), Maryse Condé (Guadeloupe, USA), Edwidge Danticat (Haiti, USA) and Julia Alvarez (Dominican Republic, USA) showing how their writing has radically reformulated the meanings of the national, geographical, sexual and racial concepts through which postcolonial studies has long been configuring difference. Coming from the anglophone, francophone and hispanophone Caribbean, these writers all stage and identify with transcultural experiences that undermine the usual classification of literary texts in terms of national and regional literatures and by doing so they challenge the idea that racial and cultural identities function as stable points of reference in our unstable world. Focusing on the transformations that have taken place in postcolonial studies since the field began to focus on theory, Mardorossian highlights not only how these writers make use of the styles of creolization and hybridity that have dominated Caribbean and postcolonial studies in recent years but also how they distinguish themselves from the movement's leading figures by offering new articulations of the ties that link race and nation to gender and class. She illuminates how these writers extend the notion of hybridity away from racial and cultural differences in isolation from each other to a set of crisscrossing categories that challenge our simpler normative figurations. For scholars in postcolonial studies, Caribbean studies, literary feminist studies and studies in comparative literature, Reclaiming Difference represents a new phase in postcolonial studies that calls for a fundamental rethinking of the field's terminology and assumptions.

Managing Cultural Change Melissa Butcher, 2016-05-13 Despite decades of policy interventions and awareness-raising programmes, migration and mobility continue to give rise to tensions and questions of how to live together in a culturally diverse world. Managing Cultural Change takes a new approach to these challenges, re-examining responses to migration and mobility as part of a process of managing wider cultural change. Presenting research from a range of settings, from liberalising India, global workplaces in Asia and migrant youth culture in Sydney, this book explores the manner in which cultural change disturbs established frames of reference. In considering affective responses to these liminal moments of disruption, it argues that adaptive strategies such as demarcating difference and re-placing home—that is, reasserting belonging—are deployed in order to reclaim a sense of synchronicity within the self and with a transforming external environment. With attention to the prevalence and durability of the processes and tensions inherent in cultural change, the author also examines the intercultural or cosmopolitan competencies developed in interaction with difference and whether it is possible to teach people these skills in order to re-find cultural fit and manage change in a constantly shifting world. Contributing to research on transnational migration and mobility studies while developing the use of conceptual tools such as cultural fit and liminality, Managing Cultural Change will be of interest to sociologists, geographers and anthropologists working in the fields of globalisation, migration and transnational communities, ethnicity and identity, belonging and cosmopolitanism. EPA 608

See Justice Done Christopher Michael Brown, 2024-01-18. In See Justice Done: The Problem of Law in the African American Literary Tradition, author Christopher Michael Brown argues that African American literature has profound and deliberate legal roots. Tracing this throughline from the eighteenth century to the present, Brown demonstrates that engaging with legal culture in its many forms, including its conventions, paradoxes, and contradictions, is paramount to understanding Black writing. Brown begins by examining petitions submitted by free and enslaved Blacks to colonial and early republic legislatures. A virtually unexplored archive of these petitions aimed to demonstrate the autonomy and competence of their authors. Brown also examines early slave autobiographies such as Olaudah Equiano's Interesting Narrative and Mary Prince's History, which were both written in the form of legal petitions. These works invoke scenes of Black competence and of Black madness repeatedly and simultaneously. Early Black writings reflect how a Black Atlantic world organized by slavery refused to acknowledge Black competence. By including scenes of Black madness, these narratives critique the violence of the law and predict the failure of future legal counterparts such as Plessy v. Ferguson to remedy injustice. Later chapters examine the works of more contemporary writers such as Sutton E. Griggs, George Schuyler, Toni Morrison, and Edward P. Jones and explore varied topics from American exceptionalism to the legal trope of colorblindness. In chronicling these interactions with jurisprudential logics, See Justice Done reveals the tensions between US law and Black experiences of both its possibilities and its perils. Springer Handbook of Circular Plastics Economy Andrea Buettner, Eckhard Weidner, 2025-06-26. This Springer Handbook assembles the existing knowledge concerning plastic materials and identifies obstacles and objectives of innovations and technologies that will bring human society closer to the goal of a fully circular economy of plastic materials. Consumers profit everyday from the versatile functionalities of plastic materials, but this diversity also brings a range of challenges: recycling may be costly and laborious, and too many plastic products still end up as waste in the environment. The handbook offers a source of information, a knowledge base, and inspiration for those aiming to create an economy that paves the road for future generations. The editorial board and invited authors represent international key figures from a broad range of disciplines, including chemistry, engineering, material sciences, logistics, data and information sciences, systems engineering, economy, and sustainability, as well as disciplines related to culture, art, and design. With its diversity, the book aims to fulfill the huge demand for information on novel technologies and legal approaches in politics, industry, and society. Key topics include: Development of biodegradable plastics, Advanced recycling strategies, Design for recyclability, Legal and economic perspectives, Role of startups and innovative technologies, Novel business models and business strategies. By allowing the reader to learn and apply the measures needed for the implementation of a Circular Plastics Economy, the handbook will be of particular interest to innovators, decision makers, planners, designers, producers in industry, politics, and society, as well as consumers and students.

Cases Decided in the Court of

Women, Judging and the Judiciary Erika Rackley, 2013 Awarded

the 2013 Birks Book Prize by the Society of Legal Scholars Women Judging and the Judiciary expertly examines debates about gender representation in the judiciary and the importance of judicial diversity It offers a fresh look at the role of the woman judge and the process of judging and provides a new analysis of the assumptions which underpin and constrain debates about why we might want a more diverse judiciary and how we might get one Through a theoretical engagement with the concepts of diversity and difference in adjudication Women Judging and the Judiciary contends that prevailing images of the judge are enmeshed in notions of sameness and uniformity images which are so familiar that their grip on our understandings of the judicial role are routinely overlooked Failing to confront these instinctive images of the judge and of judging however comes at a price They exclude those who do not fit this mould setting them up as challengers to the judicial norm Such has been the fate of the woman judge But while this goes some way to explaining why despite repeated efforts our attempts to secure greater diversity in our judiciary have fallen short it also points a way forward For by getting a clearer sense of what our judges really do and how they do it we can see that women judges and judicial diversity more broadly do not threaten but rather enrich the judiciary and judicial decision making As such the standard opponent to measures to increase judicial diversity the necessity of appointment on merit is in fact its greatest ally a judiciary is stronger and the justice it dispenses better the greater the diversity of its members so if we want the best judiciary we can get we should want one which is fully diverse Women Judging and the Judiciary will be of interest to legal academics lawyers and policy makers working in the fields of judicial diversity gender and adjudication and more broadly to anyone interested in who our judges are and what they do
