The Collected Scientific Papers of Paul A. Samuelson Paul Anthony Samuelson,1966 It is a measure of Professor

Samuelson's preeminence that the sheer scale of his work should be so much taken for granted observes a reviewer in the Economist who goes on to note that a cynic might add that it would have been better for Professor Samuelson to write less merely to give others a chance to write at all. These volumes contain virtually all of Professor Paul A. Samuelson's contributions to economic theory through mid 1964: a total of 129 papers. Included are his classic articles on such topics as revealed preference, factor price equalization and public goods, as well as some articles which until now have only been privately circulated or buried in Festschriften such as Market Mechanisms and Maximization and The Structure of a Minimum Equilibrium System. The articles have been grouped together into five books compiled in two volumes. The books in turn have been divided into sections each of which contains articles on the same or closely related topics. Within the sections the articles are arranged chronologically. The graduate student and professional economist will welcome The Collected Scientific Papers of Paul A. Samuelson as a valuable addition to their libraries.

Development Centre, 1972. Wells and Welfare Deepak Lal, 1972. Time Discounting and Future Generations Erhun Kula, 1997-07-30. Kula contends that conventional time dependent theories in welfare economics are based on the unwarranted assumption that people live forever, an assumption that underpins the criteria for many decision making activities and one that leads public sector policy makers to discriminate against future generations. It is seen in its most extreme in decision making on such long term projects as nuclear power facilities whose effects will be visited upon many future generations. How did this assumption gain currency and influence? Kula says this oddity has been imposed by mathematical economists who now dominate the scene. Kula aggressively challenges these theories which he alleges are untrue and unjust, provides an alternative method for discounting and shows how its application can yield dramatically positive results. His book is thus a unique important contribution to the theory and practice of decision making in public endeavors intended not only for academics but equally for their practitioner colleagues in all parts of the world. Kula corrects the conventional theory by assuming societal models in which individuals are mortal and generations overlap. From this emerges a new discounting theory which leads to outcomes that are dramatically different.

from the old ones The new criterion is called modified discounting and can be readily applied to real life projects In Part I Kula lays out his theory and constructs the new decision making method in which public policy makers accept the proposition that all generations ought to be treated equitably Then in Part II he provides five case studies to illustrate his theory each devoted to major public activities such as nuclear waste disposal forestry agriculture and urban transport and based on experiences in the United States the United Kingdom and Ireland
