(Psychology) (Chapter - 8) (Thinking)

(Class - XI)

- Diagram thinking: Sometimes ideas cluster like branches of a tree. It's useful to diagram our thinking in order that we will follow each possible branch to its completion.
- Developing independent thinking: Developing independent thinking in making judgements, working out things with none help or resources.
- Self-confident: To be self-confident and positive. Never undermine to your creative potential to experience the thrill of your creation.

Question 9:

Does thinking take place without language? Discuss.

Answer 9:

- Thinking could be a silent speech
- It cannot occur without language.
- Benjamin Lee Whorf was of the view that language determines the contents of thought. This view is understood as linguistic relativity hypothesis. In its strong version, this hypothesis holds what and the way individuals can possibly think is set by the language and linguistic categories they use (linguistic determinism).
- Experimental evidence, maintains that it's possible to possess the identical level or quality of thoughts altogether languages depending upon the supply of linguistic categories and structures.
- Some thoughts could also be easier in one language compared to a different.

Question 10:

How is language acquired in human beings?

Answer 10:

To realize linguistic competence, children must master the four sub-systems or language:

- Phonology: The power to know and produce speech sounds
- Semantics: The flexibility to know words and therefore the different combinations of words
- Grammar: The power to grasp the foundations by which words are arranged into sentences and therefore the rules by which words can indicate tense and gender
- Pragmatics: The power to grasp the foundations of effective communication like turn-taking, initiating and ending conversations so on.

There are two contrasting views on how language is acquired. Some suggest that language acquisition is primarily biologically determined. This is often typical nativity position in nature-nurture debate.

Other position is that the environmentalist position which views learning because the basis of language acquisition. Language development for behaviourists like B.F. Skinner follow the educational principles like association, imitation and reinforcement. They explain it in terms of conditioning. Regional differences in pronunciation and phrasing illustrate how different patterns are reinforced in several areas.

- The nativist view supported by linguistic scientist argues that human being's extra ordinary capacity to find out and use language is predicated on certain innate mechanisms.
- Chomsky suggested that children are born with powerful language acquisition, device, LAD, which represents a knowledge of universal grammar.
- Children throughout the globe seem to possess a critical period that's from infancy to puberty where learning must occur if it's to occur successfully for learning language. Most psychologists accept that both nature and nurture are important in language acquisition.
