Arthur Whistler,2002 The Samoan archipelago is divided politically into a western portion known as Samoa formerly known as Western Samoa and an eastern portion known as American Samoa These volcanic islands in the heart of Polynesia were once almost entirely covered with a mantle of tropical rainforest but after over 3000 years of human occupation much of the native vegetation has been removed and that which remains is gravely threatened by a growing population an unremitting timber industry and recurring hurricanes The Samoan Rainforest is a study of the plant cover of these islands based on the author s work in Samoa that spans three decades Based upon structure and species present the vegetation of the archipelago is divided into several plant communities such as littoral strand marshes mangroves freshwater swamps lowland rainforest montane rainforest cloud forest summit scrub montane scrub volcanic scrub and several types of disturbed vegetation which are discussed in detail in the text and richly illustrated with 130 color photos In addition to the discussion of the plant communities present there is an introductory chapter on the flora botanical history and classification of Samoa plants one on characteristics of tropical rainforests and a concluding chapter on the past present and future of the native vegetation The book is aimed at high school and college students teachers and researchers who are doing or wish to do work in Samoan forests Proceedings of the Royal Society of Queensland Royal Society of Queensland,1927 Report Commonwealth Shipping Committee,1911 Orchids of the High Mountain Atlantic Rain Forest in Southeastern Brazil David Miller,Richard Warren,1994 Petroleum Times ,1924 Private or Socialistic Forestry? Matti Palo,Erkki Lehto,2012-02-15 While deforestation continues at an alarming rate around the world discussions on the range of underlying causes continue The premise is that studying successful transitions from deforestation to sustainable forestry ex post in Finland can provide novel insights into how deforestation in the tropics might be reduced in the future Our fundamental question here is why Finland succeeded to stop deforestation for a century ago and why not the same is feasible in the contemporary tropical countries This book presents a novel integrated theory within which this case study on Finland and contemporary modeling of underlying causes of tropical deforestation are developed Finland remains the world s second largest net exporter of forest products while maintaining the highest forest cover in Europe A transition from deforestation to sustainable industrial forestry took place in Finland during the first part of the 20th century The underlying causes of this transition are compared via our theory with deforestation in 74 contemporary tropical countries Both appear similar and support our theory The interaction of public policies and market institutions has appeared to be critical during this transition

The study's findings suggest that private forest ownership with a continuous increase in the real value of forests and alleviation of poverty under non corruptive conditions has been a necessary but not a sufficient condition for this transition. In a parallel way public policies have also proved to be a necessary but not sufficient condition in this transition. The conclusion is that socialistic forestry along with corruption is artificially maintaining too low values in the tropical forests. The opportunity cost of sustainable forestry remains too high and deforestation by extensification of agriculture therefore continues. The prevailing socialistic forestry with dominating public forest ownership is by purpose maintaining administratively set low stumpage prices leading to low value of forests, wide corruption and continuous forest degradation and deforestation. An effective remedy to raise the value of forests is found to be within forestry.
