Reading and Writing Disability Differently Tanya Titchkosky, 2007-05-05 Mixing rigorous social theory with concrete analysis Reading and Writing Disability Differently unpacks the marginality of disabled people by addressing how the meaning of our bodily existence is configured in everyday literate society Tanya Titchkosky begins by illustrating how news media and policy texts reveal dominant Western ways of constituting the meaning of people and the meaning of problems as they relate to our understandings of the embodied self Her goal is to configure disability as something more than a problem and beyond simply a positive or a negative and to treat texts on disability as potential sites to examine neo liberal culture

Titchkosky holds that through an exploration of the potential behind limited representations of disability we can relate to disability as a meaningful form of resistance to the restricted normative order of contemporary embodiment Incorporating a textual analysis of ordinary depictions of disability this innovative study promises to represent embodied differences in new ways and alter our imaginative relations to the politics of the body

Cultural Stations of Disability David Bolt, 2025-11-25 In the disability community which can have multiple meanings in itself we often experience poignant moments in sociocultural discourse Our pathways to knowledge and understanding of identity are defined by life's landmarks many of which resonate with what thereby become formative figures or artefacts This mapping of key moments involves recognising and reflecting upon cultural stations of disability More than being demarcations of disruption to the normative social order cultural stations of disability sometimes pertain to its very epitome They hold something of a moment in discourse with which identification is paramount but variously emotive They may capture feelings of liberation to which we joyfully return difficult memories that we revisit to ponder or the nadir of modernity from which we can only hope to learn In this edited volume an international gathering of contributors finds and defines dozens of cultural stations of disability in music art film television programmes literature sitcom activism sport performance organisations places and events Cultural Stations of Disability A Moment in Discourse will be of interest to interdisciplinary readers in disability studies humour studies media studies film studies television studies literary studies gender studies cultural studies popular music studies and related disciplines in the humanities education and social sciences
