Parallel Processing In Cellular Arrays:

Parallel Processing in Cellular Arrays Y. I. Fet, Yachov Il'ich Fet, 1995 This text's approach to the organization of massively parallel processing is based on the utilization of cellular arrays of a specific sort called distributed functional structures DF structures These structures are related to the well known content addressed memories but provide immediate realization of an extensive nest of data processing functions In contrast to the classical cellular automata which are universal but redundant the DF structures are specialized but economical The author argues that they correspond in the best way to the nature of up to date VLSI technology
