

Upon completion of this course, the students will be able to:

1. Explain the importance of measurements in engineering and the factors affecting measurements and to estimate measurement uncertainty.
2. Apply the working principle and applications of various linear and angular measuring instruments and basic concepts of measurement of assembly and transmission elements.
3. Interpret the various tolerance symbols given in engineering drawings to choose the appropriate manufacturing process.
4. Apply the principles and methods of form and surface metrology.
5. Apply the advances in measurements for quality control in manufacturing Industries.

Hansen,2018-03-05 This text provides the foundation material for solving problems in vibroacoustics These include the prediction of structural vibration levels and sound pressure levels in enclosed spaces resulting from known force or acoustic pressure excitations and the prediction of sound levels radiated by vibrating structures The book also provides an excellent theoretical basis for understanding the processes involved in software that predicts structural vibration levels and structural sound radiation resulting from force excitation of the structure as well as sound levels in enclosed spaces resulting from vibration of part of the enclosing structure or resulting from acoustic sources within the enclosure The book is written in an easy to understand style with detailed explanations of important concepts It begins with fundamental concepts in vibroacoustics and provides a framework for problem solution in both low and high frequency ranges It forms a primer for students and for those already well versed in vibroacoustics the book provides an extremely useful reference It offers a unified treatment of both acoustics and vibration fundamentals to provide a basis for solving problems involving structural vibration sound radiation from vibrating structures sound in enclosed spaces and propagation of sound and vibration

Measurement Error and Latent Variables in Econometrics T. Wansbeek,E. Meijer,2000-12-08 The book first discusses in depth various aspects of the well known inconsistency that arises when explanatory variables in a linear regression model are measured with error Despite this inconsistency the region where the true regression coefficients lies can sometimes be characterized in a useful way especially when bounds are known on the measurement error variance but also when such information is absent Wage discrimination with imperfect productivity measurement is discussed as an important special case Next it is shown that the inconsistency is not accidental but fundamental Due to an identification problem no consistent estimators may exist at all Additional information is desirable This information can be of various types One type is exact prior knowledge about functions of the parameters This leads to the CALS estimator Another major type is in the form of instrumental variables Many aspects of this are discussed including heteroskedasticity combination of data from different sources construction of instruments from the available data and the LIML estimator which is especially relevant when the instruments are weak The scope is then widened to an embedding of the regression equation with measurement error in a multiple equations setting leading to the exploratory factor analysis EFA model This marks the step from measurement error to latent variables Estimation of the EFA model leads to an eigenvalue problem A variety of models is reviewed that involve eigenvalue problems as their common characteristic EFA is extended to confirmatory factor analysis CFA by including restrictions on the parameters of the factor analysis model and next by relating the factors to background variables These models are all structural equation models SEMs a very general and important class of models with the LISREL model as its best known representation encompassing almost all linear equation systems with latent variables Estimation of SEMs can be viewed as an application of the generalized method of moments GMM GMM in general and for SEM in particular is discussed at great length including the generality of GMM optimal weighting conditional moments continuous updating simulation estimation the link with the method of maximum likelihood and in particular testing and model evaluation for GMM The discussion concludes with nonlinear models The emphasis is on polynomial models and models that are nonlinear due to a filter on the dependent variables like discrete choice models or models with ordered categorical variables
