Rural Transport In Developing Countries:

Rural Transport In Developing Countries I. Barwell, G. A. Edmonds, J.D.G.F. Howe, J. De Veen, 2019-06-21 For more than three decades investment in the transport sector has been a priority for developing country governments. With a few exceptions roads have accounted for the major part of these investments. The explicit and often articulated assumption upon which the decision to allocate such large sums of money to road transport has been made is that road transport and development are inextricably linked. The implicit and rarely articulated assumption is that the provision of suitable roads will lead to the operation of an adequate level of road transport services. If roads do not actually produce economic development it has been argued they certainly play a major role. This belief in the beneficial effects of roads is not wholly unsubstantiated. Clearly the provision of some form of access is vital for the development of the rural economy. Nevertheless the studies carried out over the last 10-15 years on the impact of highway investment have sounded a cautionary note. George W. Wilson writing in the concluding chapter of the Brookings Institution studies on transport and development suggested that a much more sceptical attitude towards transport appears essential and far more attention needs to be devoted to the set of circumstances surrounding expansion of transport capacity. The suggestion of a more restrained attitude reflected a growing concern that transport and in particular roads was only one factor amongst a large number that needed to be integrated for effective development. The concern to see road transport in a wider context partly explains the move towards the evaluation of the social as well as strictly economic benefits of road construction.

Rural Transport in Developing Countries Henning Lauridsen, Odd I. Larsen, Johanna Ludvigsen, 1989 Key Issues in Rural Transport in Developing Countries S. D. Ellis, 1997 Improving Rural Mobility Paul Starkey, 2002-01-01 Many inhabitants of rural areas in developing countries lack adequate and affordable access to transport infrastructure services and this lack of transport opportunities constrains economic and social development. This report looks at the role of rural transport in reducing poverty and considers a range of issues affecting rural mobility including costs, stakeholders involved, population densities and competing services. It examines policies for promoting rural mobility including financial and regulatory considerations.

Rural Transport Services Henri L. Beenhakker, S. Carapetis, L. Crowther, S. Hertel, 2019-09-05 This book considers the problem of providing maximum access to transport services and to roads for the rural population of the world's developing countries when limited funds are available. Access is a key factor in both social and economic development. It promotes social intercourse and opens up markets for both the rural and urban populations. Access connotes the ability to travel and to transport goods. The components of access include both the infrastructure and the transport modes or aids that use the infrastructure. Rural Transport in Developing Countries: a Synopsis of Findings and a Framework for Studies, 1987
