Peasant Economic Development Within The English Manorial System:

Peasant Economic Development Within the English Manorial System James Ambrose Raftis, 1997 Peasant Economic Development within the English Manorial System is a ground breaking analysis that redefines the social and economic history of rural medieval England and changes the direction of medieval scholarship Peasant Economic Development within the English Manorial System J. Raftis, 1996-11-18 Offering a revisionist theory that shifts the focus from labour services required by the lord to capital required by the customary tenant Raftis reveals that peasant economic development and manorial economy are not mutually exclusive terms Using account rolls charters court rolls and lay subsidy rolls he demonstrates that lords subordinated their power to tax and to extract labour services to a policy of capital maintenance This breakthrough allows him to develop a more rational explanation for the growth of markets and wealth in a countryside not exclusively dependent on the economy of lords Peasant Economic Development within the English Manorial System is a ground breaking analysis that redefines the social and economic history of rural medieval England and changes the direction of medieval scholarship Peasant Economic Development within the English Manorial System J. Land and People in Late Medieval England Bruce M.S. Campbell, 2024-10-28 This is the third collection of articles by Bruce Campbell to appear in the Variorum series Late medieval England was an overwhelmingly rural society Never since has such a large proportion of the population lived in the countryside or relied so directly for its livelihood upon agriculture The lot of a majority of that population was always a hard one and never more so than during the first half of the 14th century when peasants competed with each other for ever scarcer land and work and a succession of major harvest failures jeopardised the survival of many Nevertheless experience varied considerably both during this era of mounting population pressure and the century and more of population decline and stagnation that followed the demographic disaster of the Black Death How well individual communities coped during these contrasting conditions of expansion and contraction owed much to the quality and composition of their natural resource endowment a good deal to their ability to take advantage of changing commercial opportunities and sometimes almost everything to how exposed they were to military conflict Always however much hinged upon how the twin feudal institutions of lordship and serfdom were mapped onto land and people via the manorial system These are the themes variously explored by the eight essays assembled in this volume which range from a case study of a single crowded Norfolk manor to a consideration of the broad and towards the end of the Middle Ages widening contrasts that persisted between North and South Property Rights, Land Markets and Economic Growth in the European Countryside (thirteenth-twentieth Centuries) Gérard Béaur, Phillipp R. Schofield, Jean-Michel Chevet, María Teresa Pérez Picazo, 2013 Phillipp Schofield is Professor of Medieval History and Head of the Department of History and Welsh History Aberystwyth University His research interests focus on rural society in England in the high and late Middle Ages

The Rural History of Medieval European Societies Isabel Alfonso Antón, 2007 This collection gathers a number of scholars to reflect on recent developments in medieval rural history in their respective countries Each individual contribution surveys recent areas of research significant results as well as perspectives for the future This is meant not only to provide a deeper insight into how medieval rural studies relate to current debates in the social sciences but also to help understand the connections between specific national historiographic traditions and present day research issues in their historical context By comparing different European regions one can see more clearly the similarities and the differences and this is a truer means of constructing syntheses and for identifying fruitful future lines of research

Credit and Village Society in Fourteenth-Century England Chris Briggs, 2009 Credit transactions were a common and important feature of peasant society in the middle ages This study of rural credit in medieval England uses the evidence of inter peasant debt litigation to investigate the lenders and borrowers the uses to which credit was put and the effects of credit on social relationships
