

PREACHING WITH INTEGRITY

"When it is in a more fragmented, lifeless form, we will have our hearts. The question is how we'll respond unless we bring into the marketplace."

—Franklin D. McCann

A large percentage of pastors who do not have had education that will sometimes come from their spouses. This is a sobering reminder that they cannot be called to speak the very words of God from the pulpit unless they do believe and living people preach with moral integrity!

This compelling argument for preaching with conviction followed the historical story of Jack Newman, a pastor struggling with the idea that God could use imperfect ministers to promote His divine will.

Through Jack Newman's experiences, Preaching with Integrity provides hope for those struggling to maintain integrity in ministry. This book also explains the integrative preaching model first found in Preaching with Conviction, providing practical help for a preaching ministry marked by integrity.

"Franklin Anderson may well be the most creative word that evangelists have been waiting for!"

—Charles Maurer

"This book is sobering, challenging, and refreshing."

—David Luskain
