Privatization in the transition to a market economy Renzo Daviddi, 1994      Privatization in the Transition to a Market Economy John S. Earle, Roman Frydman, Andrzej Rapaczynski, 1993 Privatization policies are the centrepiece of the historically unique transformation of the centrally planned into market economies Yet the peculiarities of the privatization process in Eastern Europe are little understood in the West because of differences in historical socio political and economic contexts relative to Western experience Most research on privatization in the West is rather theoretical and thus pays insufficient attention to these contexts perhaps because their importance is not widely appreciated and because there has been little information about them available Moreover the significant differences among East European countries in contexts and in policies are not well understood even within the region again because of a lack of information      Property Rights

disequilibrium could go more slowly Political liberalization and democratization helps the economic transition succeed mainly because it helps weaken the political positions of the traditional communist oligarchy nomenclatura which is interested mainly in rent seeking Unless stabilization and liberalization are achieved quickly microeconomic restructuring cannot be expected to progress quickly even if privatization does as it has in Russia Other aspects of the transition may take more time For privatization to succeed for example a legal base and organizational infrastructure must be created But even with privatization a rapid transition is less risky for restructuring and for complex institutional reform than a slow transition There is no way to avoid a relatively large decline in output especially of industrial production in the state sector Granting concessions to and bargaining with various pressure groups does not produce the expected political results or increase social acceptance of reform Governments should not be afraid of aiming too high in embarking on a stabilization program or any other component of transformation Most post communist governments do the opposite dilute the program so much it becomes ineffective This paper a product of the Transition Economics Division Policy Research Department is part of a larger effort in the department to look at progress on macroeconomic reforms in former communist countries as they move to a market economy

State, Labor, and the Transition to a Market Economy Agnieszka Paczyńska, 2012-11-15 In response to mounting debt crises and macroeconomic instability in the 1980s many countries in the developing world adopted neoliberal policies promoting the unfettered play of market forces and deregulation of the economy and attempted large scale structural adjustment including the privatization of public sector industries How much influence did various societal groups have on this transition to a market economy and what explains the variances in interest group influence across countries In this book Agnieszka Paczyńska explores these questions by studying the role of organized labor in the transition process in four countries in different regions the Czech Republic and Poland in eastern Europe Egypt in the Middle East and Mexico in Latin America In Egypt and Poland she shows labor had substantial influence on the process whereas in the Czech Republic and Mexico it did not Her explanation highlights the complex relationship between institutional structures and the critical junctures provided by economic crises revealing that the ability of groups like organized labor to wield influence on reform efforts depends to a great extent on not only their current resources such as financial autonomy and legal prerogatives but also the historical legacies of their past ties to the state This new edition features an epilogue that analyzes the role of organized labor uprisings in 2011 the protests in Egypt the overthrow of Mubarak and the post Mubarak regime

Van Brabant,2012-12-06 This volume is meant to be a modest contribution to the ongoing debate about the transitions away from the administrative planning environment typical of the former communist regimes The central subject matter is a fairly special one namely the privatization of these economies together with the restoration and effective monitoring of property rights These are paramount tasks of the ongoing transformations once progress toward political democracy is secured Though I would not allot divestment of existing state owned assets the kind of pivotal importance that some observers reserve for it changing rules on the utilization of these assets is evidently at the core of what the transition toward market based economic systems should be all about Rather than examining the entire range of issues that surround the controversy on privatization this volume is primarily concerned with the economics of taking the state out of the decision making about existing assets Among the several aspects of this discussion three stand out One is the establishment of clear property rights This is fundamental to minimize transaction costs in an environment where decisions will increasingly be taken by independent economic agents acting on their own account Second I look only incidentally at the various angles of creating capital markets particularly for existing assets in these economies      Theory and Reality of Transition to a Market Economy Xiuping Sun,Huayou Zhu,Tiejun Yao,1995      1993 Patt Leonard,Rebecca Routh,1996 Journal articles books book chapters book reviews dissertations and selected government publications on East Central Europe and the former Soviet Union published in the United States and Canada      Transition to a Market Economy Ludwig-Erhard-Stiftung,1993-01

Reconstituting the Market Paul Hare,Judy Batt,2005-08-12 Reconstituting the Market details many transition economies some already well known others enjoying very little attention from researchers and a range of important issues to do with state building and its links with microeconomic transformation The book was based on the authors view that transition in the new states would be fundamentally more difficult than in more established states a view which turned out to be incorrect since in all the transition countries the former communist state had to be largely rebuilt as part of the complex process of constructing a market economy Aspects of this process focusing on competition policy privatization and the regulation of public utilities are examined in respect to Central Europe the Baltics Russia Ukraine and Moldova The result is essential reading for anyone seeking an up to date account of key transition issues covering both familiar and unfamiliar countries
