Case: NGO Sujata Rane,2015-04-15 Research Paper postgraduate from the year 2014 in the subject Business economics Business Management Corporate Governance grade B University of Leicester course MBA Information management language English abstract The objective of the research is to find if there is any impact of knowledge capture and sharing on the project planning at Practical Action Kenya Knowledge capture and sharing are two important components of knowledge management Knowledge management has many definitions and some of these are listed in the appendix Knowledge capture is one of the elements of knowledge management where the knowledge from the organization or from outside the organization is encapsulated in processes tools or within the organizational resources to make it available to the rest of the organization The knowledge sharing can happen when knowledge is captured successfully Knowledge sharing is used to make sure that encapsulated knowledge is made available shared circulated or dispersed to be available at the right time to the right people However the attention deserved by knowledge capture and sharing in the development organizations is quite less There are multiple reasons for this phenomenon The one of the prominent reason is that knowledge is not visible Its intangible it cannot be directly observed therefore many organizations do not accept the importance of knowledge easily The research subject has originated from the fact that knowledge capture and sharing has strong theoretical presence however practical implications of it and swiftness in organizational decisions making regarding knowledge management lack noticeably Project management is more adapted science Whereas knowledge management is more spoken written than practiced Therefore in the author s view it will be useful to find a relationship of knowledge management with established discipline such as project management Project management is undoubtedly backed by the literature and most importantly accomplished in the actual project implementations all over the world However both the sciences are vast and one thesis will not justify the inter relation between the two streams Therefore to have a definite focus to study this research is trying to find if there is any impact of knowledge capture and sharing on project planning at Practical action Kenya Practical action executes development projects These are more complex and unpredictable at times as the actual executors of the projects are changing For example a project of water irrigation will be consulted by the Practical Action consultant although is actually executed by the local farmer *People of the State of Illinois V.
